AMERICAN JEWISH COMMITTEE NAMES MANY IN ACCUSING LEADING U.S. UTILITIES OF ANTI-JEWISH BIAS AT MANAGEMENT LEVEL, ON BASIS OF SIX-MONTH SURVEY

The American Jewish Committee accused some of the leading utilities of the United States of discriminatory practices against Jews and other minority groups in the recruitment and promotion of management personnel.

In making public a list of fifty utilities, A. M. Sonnabend, president of the Committee, said that Jews made up less than one per cent of the total executive personnel in these utilities, says the New York Times. Discrimination in the utilities on the management level, Mr. Sonnabend asserted, is in contrast "to other general trends in American industry, which has been showing an increasing awareness of responsibility to the welfare of the entire community."

The charges were embodied in a special report, based on a six-month survey made by the Committee. Mr. Sonnabend, a leading industrialist of Boston, is chairman of the board of the Hotel Corporation of America.

Among the listed utilities are: American Telephone & Telegraph, Western Union and Consolidated Edison of New York; Public Service Electric and Gas of New Jersey; the Long Island Lighting Company; Pacific Gas & Electric; Tennessee Gas Transmission; Commonwealth Edison; American Electric Power; the Southern Company, Southern California Edison; and El Paso Natural Gas.

Many of the accused concerns, in New York and over the U.S. issued denials that stressed employment practices with regard to religion factors. Among them were American Telephone, Western Union, Consolidated Edison Public Service, and Long Island Lighting.

Mr. Sonnabend, in his Committee's report, maintained that discrimination began during recruitment "when company representatives visit the colleges and graduate schools throughout the nation," says the New York Times. He said that Jews who were potential candidates for positions in utilities management were presented with "a negative and discouraging picture of their possibilities in the management divisions of these utilities giants."

"There seems to be a built-in discriminatory screen which has a much finer mesh for Jews than for other candidates," he went on. "Jewish personnel traditionally must do better than others either to stay in the same place, or to move up on the higher managerial ladder."

Noting that eight to ten per cent of the college-trained population was Jewish, the report declared that fewer than 1 per cent of utility executives were Jewish.

Mr. Sonnabend contended that in the discriminatory process "there is a marked tendency toward conformity in choosing and promoting executive personnel" and that "the utilities' managements conform to a stereotyped image of what they believe the executive should be."

He described these discriminatory barriers as "old-fashioned and un-American." Reached by telephone in Boston he said to the New York Times: "It is important for the best interests of the national economy that these major utilities develop an educational program within their own ranks on the detrimental effect of discrimination."

For example, Mr. Sonnabend said, have no explicit policy of discrimination but he added that the utilities "maintain a personnel practices climate that discourages candidates and members of other religious and ethnic minority groups."

Another official of the American Jewish Committee said that this type of discrimination was practiced against Negroes. However, he added that in the research and scientific areas of the utilities, barriers to the employment of minority groups were ending.

In his report, Mr. Sonnabend observed that "frequently top management fails to assume responsibility for the personnel practices of a company and is often unaware of the discriminatory climate that exists."

Mr. Sonnabend urged the utilities to undertake the following steps "toward eliminating patterns of discriminatory behavior":

"Enlarge the existing body of knowledge about minority groups in management, and the handicaps they face in promotion on merit.

"Develop an educational program on the detrimental effect of barriers to free flow of talent.

"Initiate educational programs which would stimulate the interest of minority groups in the expected opportunities in the utilities field at all levels."

The American Jewish Committee has been studying discrimination in management ranks of American industry for a number of years, says the New York Times. Such studies are now in progress at the Graduate School of Business at Harvard University; the University of Michigan Research Center; and the University of California at Los Angeles.

The present report included the following companies:

American Telephone & Telegraph (New York); Consolidated Edison (New York); Pacific Gas & Electric (San Francisco); Tennessee Gas Transmission (Houston); Commonwealth Edison (Chicago); Public Service Electric & Gas (Newark); Southern California Edison (Los Angeles); El Paso Natural Gas (El Paso); Columbia Gas System (New York); Consumers Power (Jackson, Mich.); Niagara Mohawk Power (Syracuse, N. Y.); Philadelphia Electric (Philadelphia); General Public Utilities (New York); Detroit Edison (Detroit).

Texas Eastern Transmission (Houston); American Natural Gas (New York); Texas Utilities (Dallas); Consolidated Natural Gas (New York); Middle South Utilities (New York); United Gas (Shreveport); Pacific Lighting (San Francisco); American Electric Power (New York); Central & South West (Wilmington); Peoples Gas Light & Coke (Chicago); Virginia Electric & Power (Richmond); Ohio Edison (Akron); Union Electric (St. Louis); New England Electric System (Boston); Duke Power (Charlotte); Northern States Power (Minneapolis).

Allegheny Power System (New York); Florida Power & Light (Miami); Pacific Power & Light (Portland, Ore.); Northern Natural Gas (Omaha); Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line (New York); Long Island (Mineola, N. Y.); Pennsylvania Power & Light (Allentown); Baltimore Gas & Electric Illuminating (Cleveland); Wisconsin Electric Power (Milwaukee); Public Service of Indiana (Plainfield); Potomac Electric Power (Washington, D. C.); Houston Lighting & Power; Public Service of Colorado (Denver); Gulf States Utilities (Beaumont, Tex.); Duquesne Light (Pittsburgh).

A spokesman for the Commonwealth Edison Company in Chicago said: "We employ people of many races and religious beliefs and they move ahead according to ability."

Jersey Public Service said it was "always looking for management and executive talent irrespective of races and creeds."

A spokesman for Consolidated Edison in New York compared its personnel with the United Nations, saying:

"We have people of all [illegible] so long as they have talent. We could not afford to discriminate [illegible] is the only criteria."

A. T. & T.'s statement said "We are not aware of any such discrimination."

A representative of Long Island Lighting said: "Our policy is to hire on the basis of the ability of the person involved and this holds true for all. We don't care about a man's religion or the color of his skin."

A spokesman for the Pacific Gas and Electric Company in San Francisco, said his company had "a long-established policy of nondiscrimination in our employment practices and advancement policies. We are one of the companies that post equal-opportunity signs in classified ads and observe the equal-opportunity policy."

The American Jewish Committee, which maintains its headquarters at the Institute of Human Relations, 165 East 56th Street, in New York, says the New York Times, was founded in 1906 and is devoted to safeguarding the civil and religious rights of Jews over the world.

U.S. State Spokesman Hopes Soviet Will Ameliorate Situation Of Russian Jews

American action within the United States and at the United Nations to promote human rights was outlined by Richard N. Gardner, Deputy Assistant U.S. Secretary of State for International Organization Affairs, at a conference of the World Jewish Congress, American Section, in New York, dedicated to the 15th anniversary of the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

The United States, Mr. Gardner declared, had embarked on a "new policy of considering United Nations human rights conventions on their merits." In line with this policy, President Kennedy in July of this year initiated action to secure Senate ratification of three United Nations conventions dealing with forced labor, practices akin to slavery, and the political rights of women. Each dealt with an important human right already guaranteed by the Federal Constitution and by existing Federal law.

"We believe," Mr. Gardner went on, "their ratification can play a significant part in cultivating an international environment congenial to American interests." The United States, he added, was actively participating "in the consideration of other human rights conventions, including the two Human Rights Covenants."

[illegible] that the U.N. has developed effective procedures to maintain peace and promote economic development, Mr. Gardner said it had been less successful in developing "adequate procedures with respect to its third concern, the promotion of human rights." The United States was considering ways in which the UN could deal with human rights questions "on a more objective and professional basis."

Commenting on the failure of the U.N. to provide its members with an "up-to-date, comprehensive and professional analysis of the measures taken by Member States in fulfillment of their Charter obligations to promote human rights for all their citizens," Mr. Gardner said that the real test of a nation's commitment to human rights was not its public declarations but its deeds.

Turning to human rights practices in the Soviet Union, the Deputy Assistant Secretary commented that Moscow had sought in recent years "to assert its leadership in human rights issues before the U.N. There is a certain irony in this effort, an irony of which the U.N. is frequently reminded not only by ourselves but by other members. For the Soviet Union has adopted as government policy a widespread disregard for those fundamental human rights which are embodied in the U.N. Charter and the U.N. Declaration of Human Rights.

"We cannot and should not forget for an instant," Mr. Gardner declared, "the violations of basic political liberties which have affected all religious and national elements of the Soviet population."

The religious and cultural disabilities [illegible] Jewish community in the Soviet Union constituted "a matter of anxious interest not only to other Jewish communities but to all who seek to build a better world on the basis of the principles embodied in the Universal Declaration."

Mr. Gardner said disquiet about Russian Jewry's situation was not

Goldb[illegible]s World Court To Protect Citizen's Rights In Own Lands

United States Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg said in Washington that his country should support the creation of an international court of human rights. The new tribunal would do for citizens of all participating countries what the Supreme Court often does for Americans — protect individuals against oppression by their governments.

Fifteen years ago, the United Nations approved a universal declaration of human rights. It has never been ratified by the United States, says the New York Times, and in any case it contains no method of enforcing the individual rights it proclaims.

One thing Americans should know from their history, Justice Goldberg said, is that fine words in bills of rights are useless without courts to enforce them. Such enforcement is a distinctive characteristic of the American governmental system.

Justice Goldberg noted that the Virginia Declaration of Rights and other early declarations used advisory language, such as "excessive bail ought not to be required." The Constitution repeatedly says "shall not," words of command, not entreaty, the Justice said.

But history, he continued, "had taught the framers of the Constitution that mandatory words were not enough. There had to be courts to enforce the protection of the individual.

In suggesting an international court to protect persons illegally imprisoned or [illegible] mistreated by [illegible] Goldberg [illegible] United States sovereignty would be jeopardized.

He said the international court would have jurisdiction over a claim by an individual only if his nation's courts did not protect human rights. Thus, he said, maintenance of the freedoms of Americans would keep them out of the international court.

An Aristocrat In A Moshav In Israel

We had driven along the Plain of Sharon with orange orchards bordering the highway. We were looking for a small co-operative agricultural settlement, Tolmai Elazar (meaning "the farrows of Eleazar"), which we knew to be near Hedera. That was one of the old "colonies" or settlements, now eighty years old, and a flourishing agricultural and industrial center.

But our Tolmer, two miles from the highway, was an infant moshav, established less than ten years ago and still struggling to be viable. Its first principal "cultivation," of chickens and eggs, was discouraged by the Government because Israel was producing a big surplus, and could not find a market. So the co-ops were emptied. And when we found the main street, we passed a long line of sad, derelict chicken-runs.

Our search was for a Russian Jewess of famous lineage, a grandmother who lives with her daughter and grandchildren in one of the humble, three-roomed cottages with sloping red-tiled roof which are uniform for the fifty families. A big lorry truck was being loaded with all the children and many of the adult settlers, who were going off to a feast in a neighboring kibbutz.

We asked for Mrs. X's house; and at once a cry went up: "Sabta ("grandmother")! Sabta!" It was directed to a grey-haired, neatly-dressed woman who was trudging down the road with bulky packages. She was not going to the feast and we took her into our car and drove to her daughter's, and her house.

She had just returned by the bus from Tel-Aviv which drops the Tolmer passengers a good half-mile from their village. They must carry their purchases down that weary road day or night, in sun or rain.

Mrs. X made no complaint. She was just grateful for the lift we gave her over the last stretch. She took us into the sitting-room of the house and insisted on preparing tea for us. The furniture was the barest.

Knowing as we did of her aristocrat family in Russia, and of her father, a baron of the Tsarist Empire and the owner of a world-famous library, we were surprised that there was not a single object to suggest or recall that past, not a book or a picture or even a photograph.

But she herself was a picture of elegance. She told us simply and unaffectedly her life history, and also the story of the library, which she still hoped would be brought to the Hebrew University of Jerusalem.

In her father's lifetime and during the First World War, the Jewish part had been bought by a wealthy and generous Zionist for that university, of which the establishment had been assured. But the books had not been moved from Russia when the Bolshevik revolution burst out.

At once the purchase-price deposited in a bank and the books themselves were nationalized. For forty-five years all attempts to induce the Soviet Pharaoh to let the library go have failed. But Mrs. X refuses to give up hope and urged us to help in the redemption.

Then she gave us her personal history after the Revolution. With her husband—the son of the would-be donor of the library—and part of his family she had got away to France, and they lived near Paris. They were still there when the German army broke French resistance in 1940, and occupied the city.

Now a widow, she managed to get her schoolboy son out of France to the United States, and her daughter, a young schoolgirl, to be shepherded by a group of Protestant scouts who undertook not to proselytize. She herself remained in the family home and somehow was not arrested.

The son in America, emulating Spinoza, became a diamond-cutter and prospered; the girl was trained to be a nurse. Twelve years ago she came to Israel and married. She practices her vocation, and is a night-nurse at the local hospital. Her mother — our hostess — followed a few years later, and looks after the children and the home.

Mrs. X breathed perfect contentment with her lot in the small, economically hard-pressed moshav. Not one nostalgic remarks did she make to us. She thanked God that she and her children had survived the holocaust; and she spoke with a simple faith like that of the famous Jewish diarist of the 17th century, Glückel von Hameln, who also lived in dangerous times.

Among the original settlers of the moshav were three well-educated professional men, two lawyers and a doctor. Refugees in Europe, from Poland and Germany, they had come to Israel, as she had, from France, and brought a whiff of European civilization.

The rest of the community were small-holders, decent people, part European, part Oriental. She would not think of returning to Europe or of moving to a town in Israel. She kept her aristocratic manners, without a glimmer of condescension. She is one of the people. She has kinsmen and kinswomen in England and France. Their lives may have fallen on easier places — but not on happier.

LABOR, NEGRO, JEWISH ALLIANCE URGED BY TRADE UNION CONFERENCE OF JEWISH LABOR COMMITTEE

A strong alliance of labor, civil rights, and liberal forces in the U.S. was called for by a three-day conference at Unity House, Pa., of Jewish, Negro, and labor leaders. The meeting was sponsored by the National Trade Union Council for Human Rights of the Jewish Labor Committee. The labor delegates came from twenty-eight international unions, the national headquarters of the AFL-CIO, and several state and city central labor bodies.

The dominant refrain of the conference sessions was the need for unity of the advocates of equal opportunity, full employment, and social progress. These constitute a majority of the American people, according to a conference resolution. The statement went on to say that the basic problem "is the organization and mobilization of that majority to carry out its aims."

It said: "It is here that the great liberal coalition, that fundamental alliance of progressive forces in the land, the Negro, Jewish, Spanish-speaking, and other ethnic communities, the labor movement and the millions of liberal-minded Americans, is so essential to the accomplishment of the basic goals that all of us share."

The statement warned that the only ones who would benefit by a split between labor, Negroes, and other ethnic minorities would be the "Southern racists, their Northern reactionary allies, and the labor-baiters and anti-Semites."

The main speakers at the conference were G. Mennen Williams, U.S. Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs; Gus Tyler, assistant president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union; and James Farmer, national director of the Congress On Racial Equality. Each of them called for the prompt enactment of President Kennedy's civil rights proposals to the U.S. Congress.

Secretary Williams stressed the importance to the United States prestige in Africa of the fight for equality at home. He emphasized that support for civil rights was needed not just from labor and religious leaders, but also from the rank-and-file members.

CORE director, James Farmer, in a moving address to the conference delegates, described the brutality used against Negro citizens in Plaquemine, Louisiana, where he was jailed recently for leading civil rights demonstrations. He said that horses, tear gas, and electric cattle prods were used against Negro men, women, and children in an effort to break their determination to gain equality.

Labor leader Tyler predicted a realignment in U.S. party politics that would produce a new majority party "with its mass base in the labor and civil rights movements and its programmatic architects in our intellectual community."

The three-day meeting took place in the vacation resort at Unity House, Pa., of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union. The conference theme was, "Perspectives On The Civil Rights Revolution." In addition to the labor delegates there were representatives from civil rights organizations and from the Jewish community.

The conference was opened by Benjamin Tabachinsky, executive secretary of the Jewish Labor Committee. He pointed out: "In the very famous and deeply moving address of Dr. Martin Luther King at the August 28th March on Washington, he proclaimed, 'I have a dream!' The Jewish labor movement, too," he said, "has had a dream for many years, a dream of freedom for all mankind. As ones who have been persecuted through the ages, we understand and share the feelings of other people in this plight."

One of the conference sessions was entitled, "Focus On Jewish Problems." At this portion of the meeting there was a discussion of the historic role of Jewish workers in the labor movement and of the status of Jews today in various parts of the world. Irving Brown, the representative to the United Nations of the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions, forcefully condemned the persecution of Russian Jews by the Soviet regime in his talk in the panel session on "Anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union."

The session adopted a resolution calling for discussion by the current General Assembly meeting of the United Nations of the status of Jews in Soviet Russia. Other speakers in the panel were: Isaiah Minkoff, executive vice-chairman of the National Community Relations Advisory Council; and Moshe Decter, director of Jewish Minorities Research. Henoch Mendelsund, manager of the Cloak Joint Board of the garment workers union.

In the main conference resolution calling for unity of the labor, civil rights, and liberal movement, it was pointed out that the formation of an alliance does not have to await the complete elimination of differences among those who are allied. The resolution said:

"There are justifiable grievances against segments of each of our communities. There are still some unions that discriminate against Negroes and others. There is anti-Jewish sentiment among some Negroes, not to mention the outright racism of the Black Muslims. There are some Jews who are biased against Negroes and Puerto Ricans. These problems cannot and should not be ignored. On the contrary, they must be corrected, and there is a special obligation upon the majority, progressive sections of each of our communities to vigorously combat these reactionary tendencies within their own groups. But, above all, we must retain a deep and abiding sense of mutual purpose. The existence of the alliance calls for differences to be expressed in a positive and constructive manner."

Among the speakers at the conference were officials of the United Auto Workers, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Ladies Garment Workers, Hotel and Restaurant Workers, United Steelworkers, Textile Workers, Jewelry Workers, Amalgamated Meat Cutters, Millinery Workers, Sleeping Car Porters, American Federation of Teachers, International Union of Electrical Workers, and State, County and Municipal Employees. From the national headquarters of the AFL-CIO there came the entire staff of the Civil Rights department and the directors of the education department and the industrial union department.

COHEN'S HAYMISHA FARFEL
KOSHER — PAREVE

A delicious combination of fruit, nut and spices makes this cake equally a favourite for dinner desserts or tea-time treats. And it's so easy with Magic Baking Powder!

I made it myself— with MAGIC!

Raisin-Pecan Cake

1 c. seedless raisin
2 c. boiling water
2 c. once-sifted pastry flour or 1½ c. once-sifted all-purpose flour
2½ tsps. Magic Baking Powder
½ tsp. baking soda
¼ tsp. salt
1 tsp. ground cinnamon
¼ tsp. ground allspice
½ c. butter or Blue Bonnet Margarine
1 c. lightly-packed brown sugar
2 eggs
1 tsp. vanilla
½ c. chopped pecans

Simmer raisins in boiling water, covered, 15 mins. Drain well, saving ½ c. of the liquid. Cool. Sift together the flour, Magic Baking Powder, baking soda, salt, cinnamon and allspice. Cream butter or margarine; blend in brown sugar. Beat in eggs. Combine ½ c. raisin liquid and vanilla. Add dry ingredients to creamed mixture alternately with raisin liquid, combining lightly after each addition. Fold in raisins and chopped pecans. Turn into a greased 8-inch square cake pan, lined in bottom with greased waxed paper. Bake in moderate oven, 350°, 45 to 50 mins. Let cake stand in its pan on cake rack for 10 mins. Turn out onto rack; peel off paper; allow cake to cool completely. Frost cold cake with Cinnamon Butter Icing; decorate with pecan halves. Cut this tender cake with a saw-tooth knife.

Cinnamon Butter Icing Cream ¼ c. butter or Blue Bonnet Margarine; mix in ½ tsp. ground cinnamon and few grains salt. Gradually blend in 2 c. sifted icing sugar alternately with sufficient hot cream to make an icing of spreading consistency—about 2 tbsp. Mix in ½ tsp. vanilla.

Colonel Gets U.S. Air Force Commendation Medal As Congregation Leader

For his performance of duty as leader of the Malmstrom AFB Jewish Congregation for the past three years, Lt. Col. Nathan H. Mazer was awarded the Air Force Commendation Medal at ceremonies at Malmstrom Air Force Base in Montana. He was one of five officers and two noncoms of the 341st Strategic Missile Wing to receive the Medal. Colonel Mazer's award was believed to be the first commendation of its kind there.

Colonel Mazer is coordinator of Jewish affairs at Malmstrom and a leader in the program of the National Jewish Welfare Board (JWB) for servicemen there. The part-time Jewish chaplain serving the base is Rabbi Wilfred Solomon, of Congregation Kneseth Israel, in Spokane, Wash. JWB is the government-authorized agency for religious, morale, and welfare services in all branches of the U.S. Armed Forces. Colonel Mazer had previously received a JWB certificate for his service in this program.

"The citation accompanying Colonel Mazer's Commendation Medal reads in part: 'He initiated and maintained both regularly-scheduled and special services for Jewish personnel and counselled them on their problems. He served as liaison to both the civilian Jewish people and the Christian community in a way that brought commendation from the National Jewish Welfare Board. The program he inaugurated was given a superior rating from Fifteenth Air Force.'"

- The Canadian Jewish Review is one of only 35 Audit Bureau of Circulations magazines in Canada, and one of only three published weekly in English. It gives wide, city-to-city coverage for your advertising message, to a high-ranking consumer audience. Received every Friday in the mail, it is read by the family groups which gather together for the Sabbath observance on Friday nights. Every issue is a guide to planning and purchasing, in able-to-buy homes. Sold by subscription only, the Canadian Jewish Review reaches a select market weekly, families who are receptive to the best in goods and services.
- The Canadian Jewish Review fills a definite need as a link between the individual family and the whole Jewish world at large. It is informative about the trends in Jewish thought and social welfare in these changing times; the important Jewish world news; and reports on the organizational life of all ages in the Jewish group, and all interests in the family, particularly business and professional executives, homemakers and young people.
- The Canadian Jewish Review carries more lineage in Florida Resort advertising during the winter season, than any other publication in Canada, daily or weekly; specialized or general; and more single resort advertising accounts than any publication except the New York Times. No account is a contra account. Advertising of the airlines and steamship lines serving this great resort area appears regularly as well as year-'round advertising of airlines and steamship lines serving European and Israeli ports and air terminals.

Why not make this a "LOOK-BEFORE-YOU-LEAP" YEAR?

Just because 1964 has a February 29 in it, there's no reason to go leaping into anything. Certainly not into the financing of important purchases like a car, a major household appliance or a TV. Before buying something you hope to enjoy throughout the whole bright new year, take a good look at the Bank of Montreal Family Finance Plan. You'll find that a low-cost, life-insured loan under this modern plan is just the thing to cover all your family's credit needs.

Toronto Synagogue Acquires Cecil Roth Collection For Its Museum Of Jewish Religious Art

Beth Tzedec Synagogue, in Toronto, of which Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg is the Rabbi, has acquired from the noted Dr. Cecil Roth, British historian, and Reader in Jewish Studies, at Oxford University (England), his entire collection of Jewish art and antiquities. Dr. Roth will retain during his lifetime some items which are of special sentimental value to him. Presently, the bulk of this collection will be housed permanently at this Synagogue for public viewing, as part of its growing Museum of Jewish religious art.

The Cecil Roth collection of Jewish art and antiquities is one of the most notable collections now left in private hands in the old world. It was collected over a period of forty-five years in the course of Dr. Roth's travels, especially in Italy and the Near East.

Included are: prints, and portraits illustrating Jewish history; bookplates of Jewish interest, including the two earliest known; illuminated marriage contracts from many countries, some of them (especially those from Italy) works of art in their own right; nearly fifty Hanukkah lamps from various countries, including Cochin in India, the most remarkable with its central decoration the coat of arms of a Cardinal of the Roman Catholic Church; Sabbath lamps, one which was considered by the late Mordecai Narkis, of the Bezalel Museum in Jerusalem, as the oldest in existence; a majolica Passover plate in perfect condition made at Ancona, Italy, in 1673; the unique item of a bowl of pewter for the ceremony of the Redemption of the Firstborn, the only one known; a seal of the Spanish Inquisition; a medieval Anglo-Jewish seal of the thirteenth century; medals including one struck for the coronation of King Edward VI of England in the 16th century with a long Hebrew inscription; of Scrolls of Esther with illuminations, one with Chinese illuminations apparently executed for the long-defunct Chinese Jewish community at Kai Feng Fu, thus linking up this collection with the Jewish objects at the Royal Ontario Museum; also embroideries, ancient Hebrew coins, paintings, synagogue silver, etc.

At The Eastern Region Conference Of The Canadian Jewish Congress

The recent Conference of the Eastern Region of the Canadian Jewish Congress, which was held in Montreal, with Michael Garber, Q.C., the national president, presiding, heard Harold Lande, Q.C., speak on the legal position of Jews in the educational system of the Province of Quebec, its historical background, the implications of the pending legislation (Bill 60) and maintaining of Jewish values (Day Schools and Afternoon Schools).

Mr. Lande emphasized that "The position of the Jewish community within the Protestant system of education is an anachronism because is violates the principle of taxation without representation, which is the antithesis of democracy. We, of course, would prefer to continue our harmonious relations with the Protestant School Board. I do not favor a third, that is, Jewish panel of education, and I'm sure most of us do not. But unless these minimum requests consistent with the dignity of the Jewish people are granted, sometime in the near future, we shall have to make the choice: continue to take it, or go it alone!"

The resolution, which was adopted following an extensive discussion, expressed agreement with the general tenor of Bill 60 and asked for specific provisions that at least one member of the Superior Council of Education will be of the Jewish faith and that the Jewish community will be consulted on the appointment of the Jewish member through the Canadian Jewish Congress. It reiterated the request that the legislation, which provides for assistance for independent schools on a High School level only, be extended to include elementary grades. The resolution concluded that Canadian Jewish Congress should consider the advisability of recommending a Jewish school panel if it is evident that this becomes the only possible satisfactory solution.

The resolution also projected the concept of universal Jewish education which would involve every Jewish child throughout the elementary school grades and, wherever possible, throughout High School. It urged that immediate and effective steps be taken towards achieving this goal.

Rabbi Wilfred Shuchat spoke on religious values as the basis for Jewish communal activity and the impact of this concept. Rabbi Shuchat advanced a number of recommendations and suggestions which will be dealt with by the appropriate Congress organs for formulation of a program. Harvey Golden discussed the effectiveness of the existing programs in Adult Education and Congress role in this field. Following an address by Arieh Eilav, of Jerusalem, a resolution was adopted indicating concern "at the evidence which mounts daily" that the Jews in Russia are denied the rights which are accorded to other groups and nationalities and directing an appeal to the Soviet Union for a redress of this situation.

The position of Jews in relationship to the situation in the Province of Quebec arising out of matters of accommodation between those of English and French origin was discussed by Prof. Perry Meyer, Prof. Saul Frankel, Prof. Maxwell Cohen, and the executive vice-president, Saul Hayes. Gratification was expressed with the Cercle Juif de Langue Francaise which, this year, celebrates the 15th anniversary of its founding, and the 10th Anniversary of the appearance of its bulletin.

The Hon. Maurice Lamontagne, president of the Queen's Privy Council of Canada and Minister in Charge of Biculturalism, was the guest at the concluding session, which was presided over by Michael Garber, Q.C. The Minister was introduced by Samuel Bronfman, chairman of the Board of Governors of the Canadian Jewish Congress. Following the Minister's address, there was a question and answer period.

Mr. Lamontagne, spoke of the different implications of the term "nation" as applied to the problem of biculturalism. He said:

"Those who use that expression won't help to achieve much of substance for French-Canadians. As long as we live in one country, we are all one nation. It is truer to say that we have two main cultural groups with other cultural groups as well. At the same time, we shouldn't be scandalized by use of the word 'nation'. We should avoid fighting about words."

In answer to a question on separatism, the Minister said:

"If Quebec should separate from Canada, it would also be the end of English-speaking Canada. I cannot visualize the Atlantic provinces being isolated from the rest of English-speaking Canada and so they would join or try to join the United States. British Columbia and the Prairie provinces would do the same eventually. Ontario would have no choice and it, too, would join the U.S. I maintain that eventually, Quebec and French-Canada also would have to join the U.S."

Other points made by the Minister during his address and answers to questions were: "The 'crypto-separatists' are more dangerous than the separatists, and while French-speaking Canadians must be free to make their own choice on whether to go it alone, responsible French Canadian leadership must present the alternatives, and the possible results. . . . It is all very well to speak of separatism in emotional terms, but we must give a short and long look at the consequences. The people have a right to expect from their leaders a true picture of the deep consequences of the drastic change that would result, and they are not getting enough of this picture now".

There was a question on "what the 'Jewish position' should be in the French-English dialogue", to which the Minister replied: "The 'spirit of moderation' can confidently be expected to provide the climate for those ethnic and religious groups, with their rights assured, to continue their identification in terms of practice and tradition. But they must identify themselves. Nobody but themselves can do it. All the larger groups can do is provide the environment".

Nathan Gaisin, chairman of the arrangements committee, presided over the morning session which opened with a tribute to the memory of the late President of the United States, John F. Kennedy. Mr. Gaisin read the text of the expression of condolence, which was submitted to the U.S.A. Ambassador to Canada by Michael Garber, Q.C., president of Congress. Leon Krenitz presided over the luncheon session and Monroe Abbey, Q.C., over the session of the "Jews In A Changing Quebec". Murray Spiegel was chairman of the resolutions committee and introduced the resolutions. The invocation at the luncheon session was given by Rabbi Mendell Lewitter.

There was an extensive coverage of the Conference in the English and French press and over the radio and T.V. newscasts as well as special interviews.

The Jew and Education in Quebec:

Fully cognizant of the unique position of the Jewish community as a group of persons individually integrated into the social, economic, and political fabric of the country while at the same time striving to maintain its religious and cultural identity in a democracy which permits everyone to live in accordance with one's traditions and religious principles.

Cognizant as we are of the fact that the Jews are numerically the largest non-Protestant, non-Catholic religious group, and historically are the oldest ethnic group outside of the English and French communities, this Conference.

a) Expresses full agreement with the general tenor of Bill No. 60 and views the establishment of a Ministry of Education and of a Superior Council of Education as an historic and important step towards the strengthening of the educational structure of the Province;

b) Directs an earnest appeal to the Government of Quebec and to the Legislative Assembly of Quebec to make specific provisions in Bill 60 that at least one member will be of the Jewish faith and that the Jewish community will be consulted on the appointment of the Jewish member through the Canadian Jewish Congress, which is the official spokesman for the Jewish community;

c) Reaffirms the right of every Jewish child and youth to a full Jewish education and reiterates the obligation of the Jewish community to take all necessary steps so as to ensure an effective exercise of this right;

d) Reiterates support of the concept of universal Jewish education as defined by the World Conference on Jewish Education whereby every Jewish child should get a Jewish education at least throughout the elementary school grades and wherever possible throughout High School and urges the Canadian Jewish Congress to take immediate and effective steps towards achieving the concept of universal Jewish education;

e) Reiterates the claim of all Jewish Day Schools for assistance in conducting secular programs and urges that the legislation, which provides for such assistance for independent schools on a High School level only, be extended to include elementary grades as well;

f) Concludes that the Canadian Jewish Congress should consider the advisibility of recommending a Jewish School panel if it is evident that this becomes the only possible satisfactory solution to the problems of the Jewish community in education in the province of Quebec.

Jews in Russia:

Gravely disturbed at the evidence which mounts daily that the large Jewish community in the Soviet Union is prevented from pursuing a collective Jewish life by the closing of synagogues, the deprivation of opportunities for practicing religious observances; the constant and continuous curtailment of Jewish cultural activities and publications; constant press references to Jews charged with economic offences and the unusual severity of penalties for such offences including death sentences, all of which leads to the ineluctable conclusion that the Jews in Russia are denied the rights which are accorded to other groups and nationalities.

We direct an earnest appeal to the Soviet Union for a redress of this situation and we express the hope that Soviet Jewry will be permitted to unite for common religious purposes, for the development of Jewish cultural activity, for Jewish education for their children, for formal religious and cultural bonds with Jewish communities in other lands and that it be given an opportunity for self-expression as members of the historic and ancient Jewish people.

We further express the hope that the Soviet Union, in keeping with the United Nations Declaration of Human Rights, to which it subscribed, will grant permission to those Jews who want to leave the U.S.S.R. to be reunited with their families in other lands from whom they have been separated.

Cultural Programming For The Jewish Community:

While gratified with the extent of cultural programming available in the City of Montreal under the aegis of various organizations and the involvement of the Canadian Jewish Congress in sponsoring cultural events of its own and jointly with other organizations, this Conference

a) Expresses the view that cultural programming ought to be intensified to an even greater degree so as to involve the total adult Jewish community;

b) Calls on the Canadian Jewish Congress to take the initiative towards an evaluation of the existing programs together with the sponsoring groups so that all efforts be fully supported and encouraged;

c) Welcomes the establishment of Institutes of Adult Jewish Studies and looks forward to the time when a centralized institute of Jewish studies will be fully operative in Montreal on a highest possible level and urges Canadian Jewish Congress to strive towards the development of such an institute.

the result of "any diplomatic conflict or the so-called cold war, but stems from the deep conviction that it was the business of government to recognize and protect inalienable human rights. Let me express the hope that the Soviet Union will seek to correct the situation in accordance with their own often proclaimed principles of equality for all the peoples and religions under their jurisdiction. Any amelioration of the situation would be a positive contribution to the development of better mutual understanding."

Sharing the platform with Mr. Gardner were: John P. Humphrey, director of the U.N. Human Rights Division; Michael S. Comay, Ambassador of Israel to the United Nations; and Dr. Maurice L. Perlzweig, W.J.C.'s Permanent Representative to the U.N.

Bezalel Sherman, chairman of the conference committee, introduced Dr. Joachim Prinz, chairman of the American Section of the World Jewish Congress, who presided. Dr. Prinz paid tribute to the memory of President Kennedy and noted that the Anniversary of the Declaration fell "during the time of national mourning and grief for all Americans."

Addressing himself to those organizations observing the 15th anniversary, Dr. Prinz declared: "This is an urgent world and our purpose in observing Human Rights Week must be not merely ceremonial but practical. We know of no more fitting a way to mark this anniversary than to affirm our support of the new directions outlined by our late beloved President and to issue a call for concerted effort to insure that the three Conventions be submitted are ratified quickly."

Pointing out that the draft text of Covenants to implement the provisions of the Declaration of Human Rights, had been under U.N. discussion for a number of years, Dr. Maurice L. Perlzweig said that the World Jewish Congress in its activity at the U.N., as well as at the Organization of American States and the Council of Europe, continued to urge the adoption of early measures "calculated to ease the lot of victims of discrimination and persecution."

There were certain rights on the international protection of which most nations could agree without delay or difficulty. These, the World Jewish Congress suggested, should be embodied in international instruments which could be signed without delay and ratified by numerous States. Secondly, the W.J.C. proposed, the U.N. could, within the framework of the Charter, and without waiting for the elaboration of new treaties, recognize and provide for the right of petition by responsible international non-governmental bodies.

"So long as the defense of human rights in one country is left to the governments of other countries," Dr. Perlzweig declared, "we confront the danger of substituting international diplomatic conflict for something like judicial determination. Non-governmental bodies of a genuine international character could, independent of governments and under appropriate safeguards, intervene on behalf of the victims of discrimination without necessarily exacerbating diplomatic conflicts."

The World Jewish Congress leader said that the Universal Declaration was "a living influence in the contemporary life of humanity, and that influence steadily grows. An immense and historic contribution to that influence was made by Pope John XXIII when that great and unforgettable spiritual leader brought to it the invaluable support of his exalted office."

Expressing the hope that an International Court of Human Rights would come into being, Dr. Perlzweig said that, "The Universal Declaration is not an end but a beginning. Its importance lies not only in the influence which it already exercises but in the challenge to the international community which it embodies to move forward steadily to an international system for the protection of human rights everywhere."

The World Jewish Congress conference was attended by delegations from the American Section's twelve national affiliates as well as from other major national Jewish bodies. Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the W.J.C., was host at a reception to members of the Diplomatic Corps, U.N. officers, and delegates to the conference.

Rabbi Daniel L. Davis, who two years ago conducted the inaugural service for the founding of this Temple, will be guest Rabbi at the tenth anniversary services, on Friday, January 10, and guest of honour at the ball on January 11. Rabbi Davis was born in Baltimore, Maryland, is a graduate of Johns Hopkins University, and was ordained at the Hebrew Union College. Since 1947 Rabbi Davis has been director of the New York Federation of Reform Synagogues, an agency of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations in Metropolitan New York and vicinity, and has helped to initiate more than sixty new congregations of the Reform Synagogue in the New York area. In 1956 the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion conferred on him the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity. He is the author of "Understanding of Judaism".

Friends:

Please mail me three copies of Canadian Jewish Review of December 27/63, and three copies of same forthcoming issue, the January 3/64.

The article, "Ritual in Jewish Life" impressed me so much that it is my intention to attach a copy of this article to my "Will," since I believe the authors have covered the broad aspects of understanding our Jewish heritage thoroughly and in plain, simple language.

I believe it would be a blessing for my children when they reach adulthood to have in their possession an article of this calibre which clarifies and explains the beauty of our religion in such an excellent manner.

May I offer you sincere congratulations for having this article reprinted in the Canadian Jewish Review of December 27/63, in which you mention that you have the kind permission of the Bnai Brith Youth Organization which holds the copyright.

Yasher Koach to you, and particularly to the authors, Dr. Robert Gordis, and Rabbi David M. Feldman.

GOLDBERG URGES WORLD COURT TO PROTECT CITIZEN'S

Justice Goldberg spoke at a Bill of Rights celebration in the National Archives. The occasion was sponsored by the National Assembly on Teaching the Principles of the Bill of Rights.

Justice Goldberg included in the phrase "bill of rights" not only the first ten amendments but also others, such as the fourteenth, which guarantees individual freedom and equality.

A colleague of Justice Goldberg's, Justice William J. Brennan Jr., endorsed a similar world court proposal last summer, says the New York Times. It was for an international court of habeas corpus, which likewise would consider claims of unfairness in treatment of individuals.

WHO WITNESSED THE MASSACRES OF THE TATI BY THE NAZIS?

The World Jewish Congress in New York is seeking witnesses against Nazis responsible for the massacre of thousands of Jews in the Crimea during 1941 and 1942. Among the victims was a community of Caucasian Mountain Jews known as Tati which in the pre-World-War-II period, had been resettled in the Crimea with the help of the American Jewish Joint Agricultural Corporation (Agro-Joint).

The Nazi massacres occurred mainly in Feodosia in November or December, 1941, and in March, 1942, in the district of Bupatoria. Other murders took place in the village of Ilow, the collective village of Schumsion, about two to three miles from the town of Pyrlewka, and in the village of Kurukikonogos, near Bupatoria.

The Tati get their name because they spoke Judeo-Tati, an Iranian dialect modified by Semitic and Turkish influences. In 1926, the mountain Jews numbered 25,000. A number of them was resettled in the Crimea in agricultural colonies in the process of restratification of Soviet Jewry between the two world wars.

Anyone who witnessed the killings of the Tati and other Crimean Jews, or can offer any pertinent information, is requested to get in touch with Dr. Nehemiah Robinson, Director of the Institute of Jewish Affairs, the World Jewish Congress, 15 East 84th Street, New York 28, N.Y.
